Website Copy: Review and Revision

Options for the project team and Lindsey Miller
November 2026

What the draft Statement of Work says, and what it leaves open

The draft allows two consolidated rounds of revisions per page. Four situations it does not cover decide whether that holds.

WHAT THE SOW SAYS (SECTIONS 3, 5 AND 9)

Two consolidated rounds per page. A round is one reconciled set of comments, delivered through the agreed review channel.

Five business days each way. Uncommon returns consolidated comments within five business days of each batch. Lindsey targets five business days to return revisions.

One decision-maker. Uncommon names a primary contact and final decision-maker and resolves conflicting stakeholder feedback internally.

Out of scope. Additional rounds, substantial changes in a page's purpose or messaging after approval, rework from altered wireframes, and revisions after final approval. Billed at $100 an hour with written approval first.

WHAT IT LEAVES OPEN

1. Executive feedback has no place in the sequence. If it arrives after round two, it is billable work or it arrives after the copy is final.

2. A first draft that misses on purpose or direction uses up a round that was meant for tuning copy that already works.

3. Many reviewers, one set of comments in five days. The same people are already reviewing wireframes, designs and photo selections. The promise has to be one Uncommon can keep.

4. Copy is written to wireframes while designs change. Page designs are not final until December 7. Copy written before then may need to move.

The fixed facts, and what the calendar allows

Every option has to fit these dates, counts and windows.

FEE

$30,000 fixed. Extra work at $100 an hour, approved in writing. Lindsey's sizing: 25 to 40 hours of review, revisions and QA.

PAGES

About 326 copy-bearing pages against a 350 ceiling: 71 main site, about 200 regional, about 55 school pages.

DATES

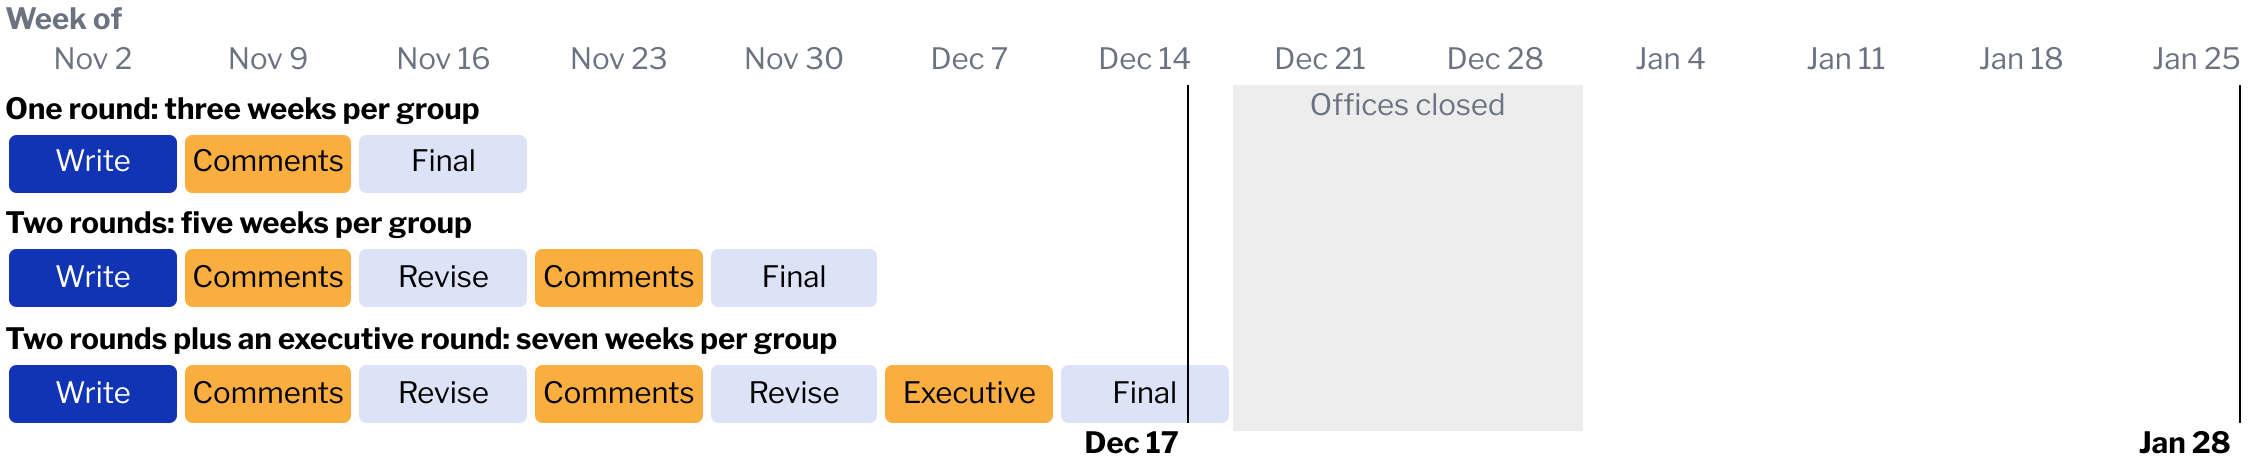

Phase 1 copy by December 17. The rest by January 14, final January 28. Offices closed December 18 to January 1.

WINDOWS

Five business days for one reconciled set of comments. Five for Lindsey to revise. Pages move in groups.

DESIGNS

Homepage design approved November 13, all other pages December 7. Copy written before then follows the wireframes.

A round costs two weeks. Only a group that starts in the first week of November can finish three rounds before December 17, and January holds one round on what is still open.

Words to agree on before the rounds are counted

Most disputes about revisions are disputes about what a round is. These definitions go into section 5 under any option.

Word	What it means in the SOW
Direction	The page's purpose, audience, key messages and outline, agreed in writing before the draft is written. The content population document already has the fields for it.
Draft	A complete first pass at the page, written to the agreed direction.
Round	One reconciled set of comments on a draft, returned inside one review window and answered by one revision.
Redo	A draft that does not follow the agreed direction. It is rewritten and is not counted as a round.
Change	A new direction after the direction was agreed, or a change to an approved page. Handled under section 9, not as a round.
Executive review	The executive team's read of a page. Its answer settles conflicting feedback and is final.
Final	The page as handed to Spinutech for population. Comments after this are changes.

The redo line cuts both ways. If the direction was agreed and the draft does not follow it, the rewrite is Lindsey's. If the direction was never agreed, or it moved after the draft was written, the rewrite is Uncommon's change. That is why the direction step has to be written down, not spoken.

Option A: three rounds in sequence, as offered

Two consolidated rounds and one executive round, one after the other, on every page, within the $30,000 fee.

HOW IT WORKS

Cycle per group of pages: about seven weeks. Each round is a comment week and a revision week.

FITS THE CALENDAR

Only a group that starts in the first week of November finishes all three rounds before December 17. Every later group carries into January, where there is time for one round, not three.

ASKS OF UNCOMMON

Three review windows per group, each reconciled into one set of comments. The executive team reads a page that has already been through two rounds.

ASKS OF LINDSEY

Three revision passes on every page. The revision hours in his sizing go to sequence, not to the pages that need them most.

COST

Within $30,000 as offered. A fourth pass on any page is $100 an hour with written approval.

MAIN RISK

The executive team sees copy last, after the most time has been spent on it. Its changes are the latest and the most expensive to make.

WHAT IT PROTECTS

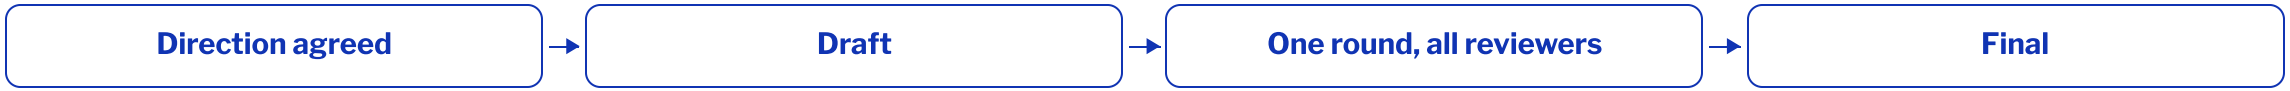

Every page gets the same treatment, and Lindsey's limit on rounds is explicit from the first day.

Option B: agree the direction first, then one round with everyone

Executives weigh in twice, at the direction and in the one round, both inside the structure. The three-week cadence holds.

HOW IT WORKS

Cycle per group of pages: three weeks and two days. The direction is approved in two days; the round is a comment week and a revision week.

FITS THE CALENDAR

Groups can start every week through November and finish before the closure. The last groups run in January on the same cadence.

ASKS OF UNCOMMON

A two-day direction approval per group by the core team and the executive team together. One review window in which everyone reads, the executive answer settles conflicts, and one person reconciles.

ASKS OF LINDSEY

A written direction for each group before he writes it, drawn from the content population document. One revision pass per page.

COST

Within $30,000 on rounds. The direction notes are time Lindsey has to agree to within the fee or price separately.

MAIN RISK

Everything rides on the one round. A miss after an agreed direction is a redo; a moved direction is a change. The definitions have to be signed, not assumed.

WHAT IT PROTECTS

Misses are caught when they cost an hour, not a page. The executive team never reads a page it has not already shaped.

Option C: rounds by tier, not by page

The pages with the most weight get the most rounds. Pattern pages get one light pass.

HOW IT WORKS

Tier list agreed → Tier 1: two rounds plus an executive round → Tier 2: one round, executives in the window → Tier 3: pattern approved once, then fact check

Cycle per group of pages: about seven weeks for tier 1, three weeks for tiers 2 and 3.

THE TIERS

Tier 1, about 25 pages: the homepage, the five regional homes, the six enrollment pages, careers, about, results and donate. Tier 2, about 100 pages: section pages on the main site and the regional sites. Tier 3, about 200 pages: the 55 school pages, the regional family and policy pages, the book pages. The first of each pattern is reviewed as tier 2, the rest fact-checked by the page owner.

FITS THE CALENDAR

Tier 1 starts November 3 and finishes by mid-December. Tiers 2 and 3 run on the three-week cadence through January.

ASKS OF UNCOMMON

Agree the tier list before writing starts. The executive team commits to tier 1 and the first page of each pattern only.

ASKS OF LINDSEY

Order the work by tier. His revision hours concentrate on about 25 pages.

COST

Likely the lowest revision hours: about 200 pages get one light pass. Within $30,000.

MAIN RISK

A tier 3 page someone cares about gets one pass. The tier list has to hold.

WHAT IT PROTECTS

Rounds go where the stakes are. The executive reading load is known on day one.

The three options side by side

Same facts, same calendar. The differences are where the rounds go and when the executive team reads.

	A: three rounds in sequence	B: direction first, one round	C: rounds by tier
Rounds per page	Three on every page	One, after an agreed direction	Three on about 25 pages, one on the rest
Weeks per group	About seven	Three and two days	Seven for tier 1, three for the rest
Before December 17	Groups starting the first week of November	Groups starting through late November	Tier 1 and the first tier 2 groups
When executives read	Last, after two rounds	At the direction, then in the one round	Tier 1 fully; the first page of each pattern
Uncommon must hold to	Three reconciled windows per group	Two-day direction approvals; one reconciled window	A tier list agreed up front
Lindsey must hold to	Three revision passes per page	A written direction per group; one pass	Work ordered by tier
Cost at $30,000	As offered	Rounds covered; direction notes to agree	Likely the lowest revision hours
Main risk	Executive changes arrive latest and cost most	One round carries everything; definitions must be signed	A tier 3 page someone cares about gets one pass

Paying for rounds beyond the fee

Lindsey said $5,000 of padding would cover the hours that more rounds create. There are three ways to hold that money.

1. Raise the fee to $35,000

Simple to write and to invoice. The hours are paid whether or not the process needs them.

2. A pre-authorized pool

Up to 50 hours at $100 an hour, approved once in writing now and billed monthly only as used, with a running statement. It covers a third round, executive changes after the final round, and rework from design changes. Section 9 stays as written beyond the pool.

3. Keep $30,000, approve each extra round

What section 9 already says. Cheapest on paper. Every extra round waits on a written approval inside a five-day window, and the approver has to be reachable.

WHAT THE FEE ALREADY COVERS

Lindsey's proposal sized the whole job at 192 to 320 hours, with review, revisions and copy QA at 25 to 40 of them. At $100 an hour that line is $2,500 to $4,000 of the $30,000, and a pool of 50 hours would roughly double it. Under option B or C the pool is unlikely to be drawn. Under option A it is likely to be.

What holds under every option, and what changes in the SOW

The rounds only work if Uncommon's side of the process is in place before the first draft arrives.

UNCOMMON'S SIDE, BEFORE THE FIRST DRAFT

A voice document from Lindsey, approved by the executive team before any page copy is reviewed. It is the standard reviewers judge by.

One named decider per page in the content population document, and one person who reconciles all comments into one set.

The executive team's page list, confirmed with them before writing starts, so they know what is coming and when.

One named data reviewer for every figure: schools, students, results. Figures are checked once, not on every page.

Review windows that hold. Five business days, or the group's dates move. Groups are ordered so the pages with the most review come first.

LINES TO CHANGE IN SECTION 5

Define direction, draft, round, redo, change, executive review and final, as on page 4.

Say where the executive review sits in the sequence, under whichever option is chosen.

Set the tiers, if option C is chosen, with the page list attached.

State the pool, if the pre-authorized pool is chosen, with its cap, rate and statement.

Confirm the count. The 41 alumni profiles and the 57 news posts carry over as existing content and sit outside the 350.

Name design-driven rework. Copy moved because a page design changed after December 7 is a change under section 9, not a round.
